A SUBTLE WAR OF WORDS ON THE INTERNET

CAROL SAUNDERS

As people of many cultures do business with one another, they often struggle to find a common language. Or do they? English is typically considered not only the language of business, but also the language of the Internet. But will its dominance continue as more Chinese start using the Internet. The subtle and not so subtle implications of being a dominating language, be it English or Chinese, are discussed.

Carol Stoak Saunders is Professor of MIS at the University of Central Florida. She served as General Conference Chair of ICIS’99 and Telecommuting ’96. She was the Chair of the Executive Committee of ICIS in 2000 and inducted as an AIS Fellow in 2003. Currently she is Editor-in-Chief of MIS Quarterly. Her current research interests include the organizational impacts of information technology, virtual teams, time, and interorganizational linkages. Her research is published in MIS Quarterly, Information Systems Research, Journal of MIS, Communications of the ACM, Academy of Management Journal, Academy of Management Review, and Organization Science.
